ENLIST.
With the recognition by national leaders that the greatest duty resting upon Americans today is that of enforcing education not only in citizenship, but in the very essentials of the commonest education—knowledge of how to speak, read and write the English language—there is a call to patriotism as distinct in this case as when the country was called to arms to defend its liberty and honor.

What avails it, after winning a victory in the field for Americanism, we should tolerate conditions at home that jeopardize our institutions? It is not alone the immigrant we must look after—to our shame there are many native illiterates.

There are instances of native adults of this country who can scarcely speak the English language. At any rate, out of the first 2,000,000 men called in the draft, there were 200,000 who could not read the orders of the army or understand them when they were delivered. Thus it has been estimated that in this country there are 10,000,000 persons who do not understand our language. How are we going to reach the ideal of one people made up of many without a common method of communication—without one language for all?

Americans must awake to conditions. In the first place, it must be remembered that America was started with the fusing of immigrants in a common purpose, and that, with immigration continuing and increasing, the motto on our great seal—E Pluribus Unum—has for years been expressed popularly in "The Melting Pot."

Never was there another such a country, and, naturally, never one with such a history. On a smaller scale, Austria-Hungary tried to be a melting pot, but we have seen that it would not melt. Whereas Europe has had a constant stream of intelligent, thrifty and well-meaning immigrants eager to learn our ways and become one of us. The percentage of those who have come in had faith is comparatively small.

How trifling in comparison were other "immigrations" with the total of the many races that have come here to be fused into one people under the dominant principle of Americanism!

From 1820 to 1914 the number of foreigners coming here to make their homes is placed at 32,027,349. Just before the war they were coming at the rate of a million and a quarter a year. In a decade the number mounted to just about 10,000,000.

Reflect now upon how they have multiplied since coming here and are multiplying! Reflect also that we have some of the non-assimilable races, and a number of particularly complicated race problems. Surely, when a view of all these problems is taken, no American will hesitate to do his part in the Americanization movement.

There is great encouragement in the record of this war. The vast majority of the immigrants, and the first generation from the immigrant, proved loyal to the principles of the country. Some who could not speak English were as eager as others to do their part for America.

Many aliens waived exemption and fought under the stars and stripes. Certain of their most treacherous in the country were several generations removed from the immigrant, and these show neglect on the part of Americans to compel 100 percent Americanism in the instruction everywhere in the country and to make examples of all who show a disposition to put the principles of another country above those of the United States.

Let all the loyal enlist in this cause immediately by giving encouragement to the leaders who are trying to secure laws and appropriations of funds for compulsory teaching of English and instruction in the duties of American citizenship.

After sending millions of our young men to risk their lives on the battlefield for our institutions, let no one hesitate to give the little time required of him to help in the vital work of Americanism at home. You know the schools and the patriotic organizations that are carrying on the movement.

Don't wait for some one of them to invite you to help.

That is just what the un-Americans would have you do, and procrastination and Americanism do not go together.

Step up now and enlist.

THE DEATH OF A SNOB.
William Waldorf Astor, of millionaire fame, died in England recently, unsung and almost unremembered in his own country where he had piled up his enormous fortune. And in the country of his adoption, it is said, his funeral was one featured by the lack of real mourning. A wealthy noble of England is dead, and the world moves on just the same.

William Waldorf Astor made his money in America, but moved to England where he settled down in chase of a title, which a gracious government gave him—after some years—in payment for the large sums of money he had spent upon it. His title may be said to have been deliberately purchased.

Yet, titled Willie Astor became more of a nonentity than he was before. His own country, which he had cast off as not being good enough, refused to worry itself about him, and the cultured, noble class of England refused to accept him as one of them. The snob was being given a taste of real snobbery.

At one time after receiving the title, Astor, in a great book, endeavored to prove that his family ancestors, poor American butchers, had descended from impoverished Spanish nobility. The assertion could not be proved, and in fact the family referred to, absolutely denied the connection. But Astor was determined that good American butcher blood wasn't good enough for him, and he held to the story to the last.

American blood, especially if it be thrifty and legitimate, is usually good enough for most people. These people usually are missed when they die. But Astor, repatriate and snob, is dead. And unremembered. It should be a lesson to other would-be snobs.

RECORD-BREAKING SEPTEMBER IMPORTS.
A very decided jump in imports and a noticeable drop in exports were the outstanding features of the country's foreign trade in September, according to a statement issued today by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce.

Imports for September amounted to $435,000,000, which is $52,000,000 more than the previous high record, established in July of this year. The total for September of last year was $262,000,000. During the nine months ended with September of this year imports

LITTLE GIRL WILES.
What's a fellow going to do
When his busy day is through
And a dainty little miss
Places on his cheek a kiss.
Boldly climbs upon his knee,
Ponders him excessively,
And then whispers in his ear:
"Need a new dress, daddy dear?"

What's a grown-up man to say
When soft little fingers stray
O'er his eyes so he can't see
All the many things which he Wants and hopes and ought to do
Which are passing in review
And he sees but one who pleads
For the finery she needs?

Who could duty's summons hear
With so sweet a charmer near?
Who could count the cost and bring
Tears to eyes so glistening
By rejecting such a plea,
Telling her it cannot be?
When love wants another dress
Man can only answer "Yes."

Little girl so young and wise,
Well you use those glorious eyes,
Well you use those dimpled arms
And your many tender charms.
You have learned, whatever it be,
How to have your way with me,
And your mother sits and smiles
As I fall before your wiles.

amounted to $2,697,000,000, against $2,823,000,000 for a similar period of 1918.

Exports during September were valued at $593,000,000 as compared with $646,000,000 in August of this year and $560,000,000 in September, 1918. In the nine months period of this year exports amounted to $5,566,000,000, against $4,569,000,000 for the corresponding nine months of 1918.

The excess of exports over imports during September amounted to $158,000,000, the lowest figures for any month since July, 1917. During the nine months period ended with September of this year the excess amounted to $3,169,000,000, against $2,237,000,000 for a similar period last year.

Their Opinions

A woman might as well insist on wearing cloth of gold when her provider is bankrupt as to follow the ill-timed fashion of leather coats under present conditions. Although leather is "out of sight" in price, we read that this fashion "rages uncontrollably"—and shamelessly, it might be added.—Madison Democrat.

CAPPER OF KANSAS

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 30.—A year from today a presidential campaign will be on, and the most powerful of nations, to function during one of the most important periods in existence, will be carried by a man who is now being looked over by the American people. There is almost no information upon which to base a conclusion as to who will be the standard bearer for one party or the other.

For candidates are being called forth into the open as race horses might be led from their stables, and are being given work-steps under the stop watch to determine their probable speed should they be entered in the great handicap. Among these who are now being looked over by the American people is Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas.

Senator Capper is urged as the candidate of the great party of the hour. He is urged as the man from Topeka, the heart of that great middle United States which produces the food of the nation. He is urged as the man who will give the people the benefit of his own experience in the Alleghenies and the Rockies, as the man who appreciates their needs and who will build upon those needs as the basis of a new era of progress.

So if we give heed to this demand from the corn belt, it is well that the public there and elsewhere should get a bit of picture of the man who is being looked over by the American people. Senator Capper gives this picture.

Senator Capper appeared the other night before the National Press club in Washington and recited a piece entitled "There's Where the West Begins." He said that the people of Kansas elected him to the senate because he could not make a speech. His theory was that they were tired of speech makers in public office. The senator's method of address was that of a conversationalist and inclined to be confidential. He may not be a good speaker but he is a good talker.

He is about five feet six inches in height and would fit the scales at something like 130 pounds. He once ran a half pound over this mark, he says, when he was a young man. He lived for six months in a Washington boarding house. He is thin and wiry and active—a man who carries his burden of responsibility and who keeps it through a constant use of all his faculties.

The United States senator is a graduate newspaper reporter. He was born in Kansas in the little town of Garnett in 1865, which means that he is now 54. He grew up in this little prairie town of four hundred population. He got his education in the public schools and did not carry it beyond high school from which he graduated at the age of 18.

Slicks Type for Weekly.
While going through high school he had worked evenings and Saturdays at the printing press of the county weekly, and had learned to be a pretty fair printer. So when he graduated from high school he took a job as a printer in the office of a newspaper and lived for six months in a Washington boarding house. He is thin and wiry and active—a man who carries his burden of responsibility and who keeps it through a constant use of all his faculties.

The senator's fitness as a politician may be shown by one incident in his early career at Topeka. On July 1, 1891, the city of Topeka was hit by a fire which burned for five days. He issued, through his publications, an invitation to every child in Kansas to come to a party as his guest and drink pink lemonade, eat sick candy and ice cream. Fifteen or twenty thousand children usually come. These parties are so successful as to throw down the gauntlet to the hundreds of politicians in the city who are accustomed to stage such functions in the interest of their political campaigns. Also it causes one to think of what might happen if this man should become president and widen his sphere.

Makes Specialty of Children.
Senator Capper has long made a specialty of children. He has none of his own but holds an interest in each child in Kansas. It was while he was in the great pig club in the United States. Now he has more than $50,000 loaned out to members of his pig clubs in Kansas. He loans from $50 to $100 apiece to 10 boys in each county in the state to be expended in raising prize pigs. So good has been the idea that the federal government has adopted and encouraged it. What he does for the boys and pigs he does for the girls and chickens. This has his intimate knowledge of the nation's pig and chicken raising. The best advertisement for any town is a good cup of coffee.

THOSE FUSSEY GIRLS.
Miss Henrietta Daisy Gray was all dolled up on her birthday, for she was sweet 16. She got a bracelet from her beau, a locket from her brother Joe that set him back one year; a wrist watch and a lavender she next received from mother dear, a ring from Uncle Ben. Her cousin Roalie's oldest girl sent her a string of pearls from a dead Bullwinkle's 5 and 10. Then Sister Minnie came across with a new dress of albatross, and that frock was a scream.

A grand plan came from dad, a diamond brooch from Uncle Thad—and still she had the blues. When she surveyed these gifts galore, the beauty said I had this roar: "I want some white kid shoes."

Looks as though there won't be much left of China 5,000 years from now.

A sidelight on the servant problem is furnished by a note which has been in the following want ad, discovered in the New York "Herald": "SITUATIONS WANTED by couple as cook and butler or valet and maid. We are wonderful if the mouse man takes the place of the family cat."

We presume a "quiet" wedding in high society is one without police interference.

HERRING LIVED IN CAGE.
London, Eng.—The worst of fish stories is that some one always comes along with a better one. This puts it over the last one that went the rounds here.
"An ordinary herring," writes a naval officer, "was put in a large bowl of salt water every day, and every day a small quantity of the water was removed and an equal quantity of fresh saltwater. Then a small quantity of the fresh water was removed daily and finally the herring was placed in a cage."

SCANTY CORSAGES.
London, Eng.—For those who like extreme fashions the evening wear belt corsage has a new rival in the V-shaped bodice. The bodice of today is cut down thirteen inches from the throat to the waist, back and front. It is caught together by a pretty head buckle, a knot of flowers or a bow of ribbon. It is an audacious travesty of the demure fichu bodice, beloved by former modest generations, who required for their corsages about six times as much material.

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium and Mildred Harris Chaplin.

It is not often that two queens are photographed in the United States, but here they are a movie queen and a real queen. Mrs. Charles Chaplin is reported as being the only moving picture star in the United States who had the distinction of being officially presented to the Queen of Belgium. Mrs. Chaplin is shown here with the queen, to whom she has just presented a large bouquet of orchids. The Chaplins offered their airplanes to the Belgian royal couple for their short stay in Los Angeles and this picture was taken on the Chaplin aviation field. Mildred Harris Chaplin's press agent claims that although every other state tried for the honor of meeting the queen, that little Mrs. Chaplin was the only one to succeed.

BUYS-STORY FOR OLIVE THOMAS

Myron Selznick announces that he has purchased the motion picture rights to "The Girl With the Faun's Ears," which was written by Phyllis Duggan.

sister Lillian. The first time was when the Griffith troupe went over to Europe to make exteriors for "Hearts of the World." Mrs. Gish and Lillian left two boats before Dorothy. This time Mrs. Gish and Lillian have gone on to New York and it will be well into November before the younger Gish leaves the coast and starts eastward.

DANGER OF EXTREMES
Dublin, Ireland.—In a letter which was read at the Congress of the Catholic Total Abstinence Federation in Dublin, Cardinal Logue referred to the growth of illicit distilling in Ireland, which he regarded as a very threatening obstacle to the spread of temperance. He pointed out that, owing to the continued heaping of taxation on the manufacture of spirits, illicit distilling had become so profitable that the fines imposed in the case of conviction were a very slight deterrent. The advocates of temperance were pleased when the increases of duty on drink seemed to favor their cause, but he feared that the result would prove the danger of extremes.

ROYAL PALACES USED TO AID RENT PROBLEM

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, Oct. 30.—There is a widespread demand that the former royal and princely palaces and castles of this city be utilized to allay the need of dwellings during the coming winter by renting parts of them to people in need of homes. Mayor Wernuth has sent a telegram to the imperial dwelling commissioner calling his attention to this situation. The commissioner, in reply, says there are in Berlin only six of these buildings, that are large and notable. Of these, the former emperor's palace, in which troops were housed for some time, will be occupied by state employees as rapidly as its rooms are vacated and eventually will be made into a museum for works of art. The Marstall, the formerly royal stables, also has been occupied by troops but will be turned over to the city of Berlin for administrative offices.

Charlottenburg castle has been used since December last as an orthopedic hospital, except the middle section which is extraordinarily artistic and historically valuable.

Credit and Delivery Cause Boost in H. C. L. Is Claim

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Calumet, Mich., Oct. 30.—The elimination of the credit system and delivery charges would reduce the cost of living by 15 percent, according to retail merchants who testified in the living cost inquiry conducted by Prosecuting Attorney Lucas of Houghton county. Two witnesses, representing two of the largest mercantile establishments in the district, testified that a cash system and a "carry-your-own" plan would be a body blow to rising household expenses and they suggested these systems as the only remedy for present conditions.

NIGHT LIFE IMPROVES ON LONDON STREETS

London, Eng.—Night life in London has improved greatly, especially in certain streets that were once notorious, according to Mrs. L. Stanley, who is chief of the Woman's Police Force.

"The confidence that is now felt in the force is shown by the large number of girls who voluntarily come to the policewomen for help," Mrs. Stanley adds. "The policewomen never arrest, only advise and help. Their work is to prevent people from breaking the law. Their advice is generally well received."

SPINSTER AT 103

London, Eng.—"The secret of long life is the possession of a contented mind, regular habits and living on good plain food," declares Miss Besie Wallon, who has just celebrated her 103 birthday. "I never married," she continued, "because I always wanted to have my own way, and that is difficult in wedlock, as marriage means submission. However, I do not advocate all girls remaining single; most girls are happier when they are managed by a man."

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MISS THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am seventeen and my brother is fifteen and we work to support our family. We have four younger in the family and our father was killed. I have what you would call a good job, but it is very hard work, and I do not want my younger brothers and sister to have to work. My mother does not believe in much schooling and wants my sister to go to work when she is fourteen. I work overtime now to save money so that she will not need to work and can go to school. She likes study. She will be fourteen in November. My mother make her stop and go to work? She is not strong.

Write a letter to your sister's school teacher and tell her what you have told me. She will take the matter up with authorities and will do what she can. I believe that the matter can be arranged so that she can continue with her school work. You are inspiring to me. In this commercial age, one sometimes forgets the silent heroes who unselfishly give their lives in helping their loved ones. Your unselfishness is splendid.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man twenty-five years old. I got acquainted with a girl five years ago. I liked her quite well and thought she would make me a good wife.

We both went out for a walk when I called on her about two months ago and while we were out she asked me to marry her. I said yes. I was struck by this and without thinking I told her we would be married in May, 1920, on date set. I did not think this was a wise move. Was it right for her to ask me that question? I haven't given her any thing yet to that effect. She always takes her brother or another sister with her when I call on her. I have got tired of this. I have been known by her parents at my life and I think I am chaperoned when I go with a girl. I have lost all love toward her and just now I feel so that I don't care to go with any girl unless I find the right one. What is the best way to let her know that I don't care for her anymore? Shall I write to her or shall I give her another visit and tell her?

WORRIED.
I think you should write the girl as kind a letter as possible and tell her that you find you do not love her and under the circumstances will not call again. You are engaged since you set a time to be married and encouraged her at the time she asked the question. It was not her place to suggest an engagement of course. I met Mrs. Thompson: I have three men friends, one being twenty-two, one twenty-four and the other twenty-eight. I go with one and correspond with the other two. They all tell me they love me and want to marry me, but I can't decide which one I love best.

I live with my sister and she wants me to marry the oldest one, and I don't like him as well as the others. I am old enough to choose for myself. A DAILY READER.
You are scarcely old enough to marry, but I think you are old enough to know your mind before making your decision. There is one thing certain, you should not marry the oldest one since you care more for the other two.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Is olive oil harmful if used on the eyelashes, but care should be taken not to get oil on the eyeball?

GIRLS OF TODAY

BY HELEN RANDOLPH

Mersey me, what is the world coming to, anyway? What do you think I saw the other day in a store? A dainty little bow of pink ribbon with the words printed on it: "Please don't kiss me." It was meant to be pinned on baby's shoulder in order to protect the child from the well-meaning but disease-laden kisses of chance admirers. Clever little idea, wasn't it? For there are many people who, on stopping to reflect, would realize that it is better if they did not kiss a baby, but who, without the warning of the little bow, would unthinkingly yield to the impulse to cuddle and kiss the child.

Modern mothers are learning to keep their children away from exposure to disease, so far as possible. Sometimes it takes courage, too. A baby I know was taken to visit her great-aunt, not knowing when the aunt was suffering from a severe cold. With considerable self-abnegation, she is exceedingly fond of children, and especially of her own relatives—the aunt refrained from kissing the child or even holding her during the entire visit. Result: the child did not contract the cold and might have done if the aunt indulged her wish.

If everyone would be as thoughtful as this great-aunt much less disease would be spread.

She Married an Average Man

By ZOE BECKLEY.

Everything in chaos tonight. Charles Belton has indeed "gone out of our lives," as I innocently remarked in my diary after the episode of his "last" love. He is gone—gone—and taken every dollar of his own money and a dollar of mine. It is all a dreadful muddle to me. Jim talks of "overdrawn accounts," "joint bank funds," and "misappropriations." I simply know that Belton has disappeared, that there is no trace of him whatsoever and that even if he could be found nothing could be done to him. Evidently my poor Jim made some blunder in the partnership agreements and has been wiped out, ruined!

Now is my chance to be his comfort and source of courage. Nothing seems to matter except that he is in the dark pit of despair and that I must help him. I tried to think out things tonight while he was at the office going over the books. "Jim," I began, as soon as he came home, "tell me exactly how things stand. Have you anything at all in bank?"

"Ann, I do wish you would keep out of this and not trouble me with questions. This bit of business is not for a woman. Leave it to me." "I shall leave to you," I said slowly, "the things I cannot handle. But I shall NOT be told like a child to run away and play with my dollies at a time when my intelligence, my strength, my love—all my resources, in fact—should be brought to bear on our problem."

"This is not alone your trouble, Jim. It is my trouble, too. I have a right to share it and help find a way out. Your ideas may be very chivalrous, but I prefer fairness to chivalry. I demand the right to think, to plan, to work for our common good. I do not wish to live to be arranged for me. I must have a hand in things." "Remember, I am your partner, Jim, and an efficient partner takes an honest share of whatever comes, good fortune or ill. Never again tell me that this or that thing is 'not a woman's business.' I'll make it my business. Who says what is a woman's business and what a man's? I have the right to try out my brains and my hands in whatever ways I can best develop them and serve our joint interests."

"I may have been over-vehement. Jim gazed at me as if I were a mad woman. But I held my point. I shall not be petted and stifled until I am a willing nonentity like some wives I know."

"Sometimes I think, Ann," said Jim, his head between his hands, "that you WANT to get out and scramble in the mud of business affairs like these strong-minded women you seem so fond of—Albina, Hattie and her bunch. Here you go bursting into a perfect tirade because I try to set my wife upon a pedestal and keep her skirts free from the soil of the world."

It stung me cruelly. But I realized that Jim's nerves were strung to the breaking point, and I did not answer as my impulse urged. Instead I did something practical. I got my savings bank book and put it in Jim's hands.

"Now my dear," said I, "let's have done with this silly dispute. You'll find four hundred dollars there. Money I saved long ago, in Centerville. Add to it whatever you have and start fresh, in partnership with some honest man. Or find a job until

THE CONSTITUTIONALLY WEAK CHILD.

Some mothers begin pampering their children soon after birth. It is a habit which grows on the mother and on the child. Take the proper purpose—to hold the dressing on the navel. As soon as the dressing becomes superfluous—which it does, as a rule, before the baby is 10 days old—the bellyband should be omitted.

A doctor who has devoted a few years to medical mission work in the Orient visited an Adirondack resort last summer. He fished along his boss and his good luck. Every morning that boss took the good luck to the lake for a nice cold bath. Good luck crowded and welled and thrashed around in great glee. And the water was cold too. But the doctor didn't care, and his boss didn't mind, and the good luck registered satisfaction—but there was a lot of Saltygramping about the hotel every time the boss was in the water.

There is a period in every child's life when he or she exhibits a pronounced disinclination for exercise in the form of work or play. This accompanies or follows a period of rapid growth. Parents are too prone to assume that the child has a "weak constitution," and therefore cannot indulge in active exercise. This pleases the child immensely, and the final result is a more or less pronounced state of nervous irritability, poor digestion and faulty assimilation, various functional difficulties and poor general development. Parents often attribute heavily to the child's delinquency. If instead of accepting the hasty conclusion that the child has a "delicate constitution," the parents will see to it that the child is given proper physical training.

EVERYDAY HELPS

By GRANDMOTHER WELLS

At present corn meal is 10 cents a pound, and to use it occasionally instead of wheat flour will be an interesting and useful economy. Corn meal is very nourishing; cooked in appetizing ways, it is a delicious food. As a change from oatmeal, sago, morning, try hot corn meal for your cereal. It will have a fine, delicate flavor. Mix a cup of corn meal and one teaspoonful of salt with enough cold water to form a thick paste. Stir this slowly into one quart of boiling water. Let it cook, stirring often, for 5 minutes. It is not convenient to have here.

HOME GIRL.
No, indeed. I do not think such a thing would be run to a rule. It seems to me the rudeness comes from the other side. If you were not especially friendly with the girl and had not invited her to visit you, just write a dignified note, saying it will not be convenient for you to receive her at that time, but say, rather indefinitely, that perhaps you may meet some time again.

Well, I should say NOT. I left the book on the table beside him, kissed him, went quietly into my "get-away room" and closed the door. I think Jim will change his mind. What poor sports men are some times. (To be continued.)

Apple Sauce Substitutes—A fine substitute for apple butter may be made of pumpkins and cranberries: Six pounds of pumpkin, one pound of cranberries, three pounds of sugar, one tablespoon of nutmeg.
Pare pumpkin and cut in cubes. Steam in covered dish until nearly done, add washed cranberries and continue to cook until done. Sift and add sugar and spices (any preferred spice may be used).
Continue to cook in an uncovered dish until of the desired thickness. Care must be taken, lest it scorch. Place in sterilized jars and when cold cover with melted paraffin.

Mince Meat—Now when the fall apples are being harvested the windfalls, which, of course, cannot be sold or stored, may be utilized for the good old home-made mince meat. A neck piece of meat may be used for the mince meat, if it is well soaked and cooked until thoroughly tender. The following is a recipe which has been successfully used for a decade and makes delicious mince meat.

Four pounds lean beef (neck) put through meat grinder, tart apples (two cups to one of the meat), one-half cup ground suet, one cup boiled cider, one cup molasses, one teaspoon.

SCORES FROM HERE WILL SEE GAME AT MADISON, SATURDAY

More than 50 Janesville football enthusiasts are planning to attend the Wisconsin-Minnesota game at Madison, Saturday. More interest is being manifested locally in the coming conflict than in any conference game in two years, probably because of the intense rivalry which has always existed between the two schools and the great grid battles which have been staged in previous years.

Reno Koch, Joe Denning, Roger C. Cunningham, Victor Fleming, Howard Clithero and Don Korst are among those who will head large delegations of Janesville fans. Many of the fans are also planning to attend. Some will make the trip to Madison in autos.

Coch Richards planned to hold the first open practice in three weeks at Camp Randall this afternoon. The student body and dopesters generally are believed to be under-estimating the strength of the Gophers and are looking for a Wisconsin victory with confidence. Coach Richards recognizes the prowess of Coach Williams' huskies and is preparing for the hardest battle of the season.

The Minnesota eleven went through its last work-out yesterday and every man showed himself to be in top-top shape. The team will leave Minneapolis tonight, arriving in Milwaukee tomorrow morning, stopping there until Saturday, when the journey to Madison is made.

Of the two other "Big Ten" games on the docket for Saturday, the Illinois-Chicago contest seems to be attracting the most attention locally. Dopesters here see in Chicago's 41 to 0 victory over the Purple last Saturday an easy victory for Chicago over the Illini Saturday.

The Northwestern-Michigan game will be watched with interest because the outcome will serve to give a line on the strength of Michigan and Ohio as compared to Wisconsin.

TWO LEAGUE GAMES AT ARCADE TONIGHT

Two more games in the City Bowling League are listed on the docket to be rolled at the Arcade alleys on North Main street tonight. Clauson's Colts, near-champs of 1918-19, will take on Murphy's five while the Lawrence Lunch team will make its formal bow to the public, meeting Harry Siegel's hopes.

Games listed for Tuesday night are: Arcade vs. Samson and Gazetto vs. Ralls.

Ohio Professional Grid Teams Are Set for World's Series of Gridiron

By N. E. BROWN.
The two greatest football rivals in the world are at it again. We refer to the Canton and Massillon, Ohio professional teams.
For fifteen seasons—this is their sixteenth—the Massillon Tigers and Canton Bulldogs have battled for what has come to be the world's professional grid championship. Unlimited funds have brought the greatest players of the country into the lineups so that the title of world champion could be tackled to the winner each year.
The rivalry began back in 1904 when Canton imported the first outside star to give it a stronger team. But the Bulldogs haven't had the "world's series" to themselves. Akron and Shelby have tried repeatedly to gather together teams which could cope with them, but the title always has remained in Canton or Massillon. Cleveland has tried, too, to develop on a team worthy of a crack at the old-timers, but so far has fallen a bit short.

This year the Indians and Tigers will play two games—both at Canton—Nov. 16 and Nov. 30.
Massillon has a team of all-American stars collected that would knock your hat off. The list gives the impression that Manager Jack Whealan had just picked up a copy of Walter Camp's all-American selections for the past few years and then hepped on a train to line 'em all up.
Members of teams that are doomed to tackle the Tigers this year may read them and weep.
Bob Nash, tackle, all-American and while at Rutgers.
Bob Peck, center, all-American center at Pitt.

Tressell, end, all-American end at W. J. T.
Thornhill, tackle, all-American man at Pitt.
Stanley Cofall, captain and full-back, all-American selection at Notre Dame.
Pat Herron, end, all-American end while at Pitt.
Gus Dorcas, quarter, all-American star at Notre Dame.
All of these men were picked as the best in the land by Camp.
Jack Whealan has taken the team under his wing, so to speak, as a hobby. He is superintendent of the Wheeling & Lake Erie at Massillon and an official of the Massillon Coal Mining Co.

Britain Is Elaborate For Alleged Waste

London, Oct. 29.—National finance was the topic for debate in the house of commons today with the government facing probably as critical a body of members as ever appeared in parliament. More than 100 members had given notice of a desire to speak and all were understood to be prepared to belabor the government for its alleged waste and extravagance. Some of the government's keenest critics are among the supporters of the coalition, including such staunch unionists as Sir Edward Carson and Lord Robert Cecil.

CULLING OUT HENS SAVES TONS OF FEED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, Oct. 30.—Sixty tons of feed valued at $4,200 or more was saved for the winter when 4,000 hens were culled out at the poultry demonstrations recently held in 14 different counties by J. B. Hayes and Duncan Reid, poultrymen of the College of Agriculture.

Fully 15,000 hens were handled during the demonstrations which were held in cooperation with the county agents of the respective counties.

"Culling the poultry flock in late summer or fall insures that the feed will be consumed by the best producing hens, and saves those that will make the best breeding birds," says Mr. Halpin. "Among the pullets those that are hatched early in the season, that mature early, and have begun to lay in the fall are generally birds which should be kept."

The counties in which the poultry demonstrations are being continued are: Marathon, Burnett, Jefferson, Kenosha, Winnebago, Sheboygan, Walworth, Buffalo, Waukesha, La-Crosse, and Columbia.

London, Eng.—"I was afraid to be alone at night," is the explanation given for his third matrimonial venture by 90-year-old John Godfrey, who has just married Mrs. Sarah Parsons, aged 75. The bride has for some time acted as housekeeper for the bridegroom, who is wealthy and hale.

At the wedding ceremony the bridegroom's stentorian answers to the clergyman suggested one much nearer 40 than 90. He spends most of his time making models of railway engines, which he trundles along in every local hospital parade.

SPORT SNAP-SHOTS

BY JACK KEENE.

The revival of yacht racing for America's cup was made certain when it was announced recently by George Cormack, the secretary of the New York Yacht club, that another challenge had been received from Sir Thomas Lipton through the Royal Ulster Yacht club of Belfast.

The New York Yacht club informed Sir Thomas last December that it would defend the trophy in 1920 if the Irish baronet would challenge again. All that now remains to bring the revival of the international classic is to name the waters for the contest, which will be between the Shamrock IV, challenger, and either the Resolute or the Vanitie, the defender.

Lipton's challenge proposes that the races be opened on Thursday, June 24, but unofficial comment indicates that it would be impossible to hold the event that early. The first contest probably will be run off in August.

There is a faction in the New York Yacht club which favors changing the course to the waters off Newport. This question and the matter of the annual meeting of the club, which is scheduled for December, are probably the decisions will be forwarded to Lipton even in advance of the annual meeting of the club, which is scheduled for December.

The challenge from the Royal Ulster Yacht club reads: "We beg leave again to challenge for the America's cup on behalf of Sir Thomas Lipton. Yacht will be Shamrock IV, already in America. First race to be sailed Thursday, June 24, 1920."

The dispatch is signed by H. L. Carret, secretary of the sub-committee for the America's cup challenge. Sir Thomas Lipton challenged for the America's cup in 1913 with the Shamrock IV, and the races were arranged for the summer of 1914. American syndicates built the Defiance, the Vanitie and the Resolute. After a series of elimination contests the Resolute was picked as the American defender, but the war caused the races to be called off. The Shamrock IV is in dry dock in South Brooklyn.

Bill Donovan, once the star pitcher of the Detroit Tigers, is another strong advocate of new rules to prohibit the use of the spitter, shiner and paraffine ball by big league box-men.

"The pitchers already have too great an advantage over the hitters," said Donovan recently. "They should not be allowed to rub the ball on their uniforms or thrust their fingers into their pockets. I believe that the windup should be abolished and that the pitchers should work without gloves."

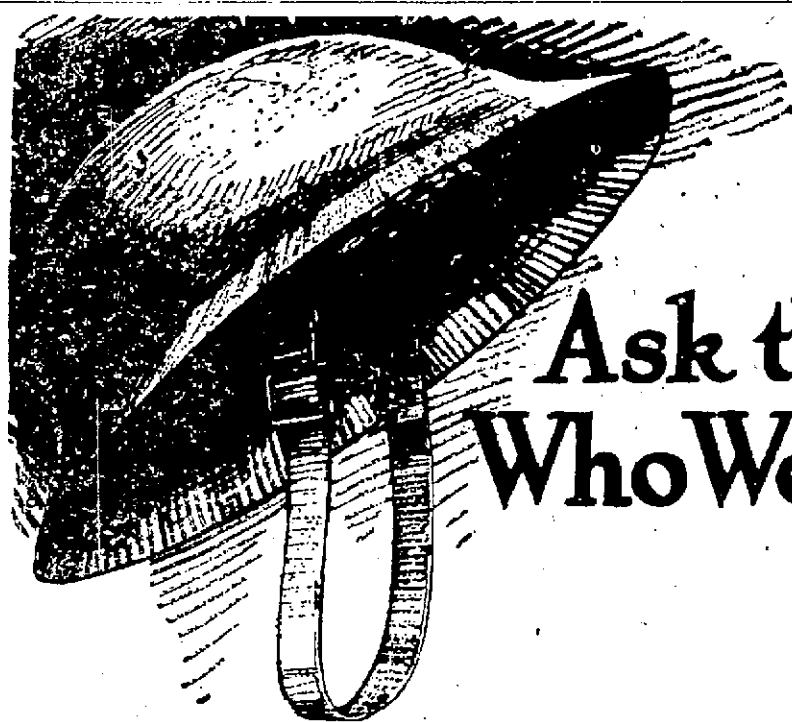

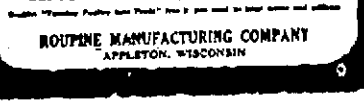

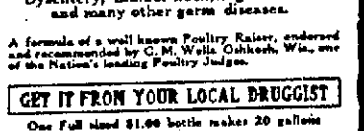

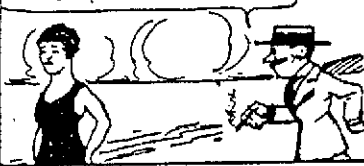

The umpires should provide all of the balls, as it is a common practice to doctor them before they are thrown into play. By using a small file on a part of the seam a ball can be made to break in the most extraordinary manner. Wetting the seam in another trick much in favor. The rule makers should put an end to all forms of sharp practice. Natural pitching is enough!"

The ages of ball players, particularly the ages of players who have been in the game for a decade or so, usually are unknown to the fans, for diamond stars dislike almost as much as do prima donnas to tell how old they are. Nevertheless, the record books indicate that two American leaguers who played at least part of the season of 1919 are older than any players in the senior major leagues. They are Terry Turner and George McBride, who were born in 1881, and are therefore 38 years of age. The oldest men who took part in championship games of National league clubs last year were Gavvy Cravath, who succeeded Chick Combs as manager of the Phillies in mid-season, and Leon mes. Cravath and Ames are both

ORIENTAL TURBAN WITH HAREM VEIL IS SOMETHING UNIQUE AND VERY FETCHING

By ELOISE.
It has been said that American women look too much alike with their one-piece blue frocks which everyone wears. Even if the frocks do differ in cut and material they look alike because of that prevailing color, navy blue. This year another color has made its appearance and it is running navy blue a close second. There seem to be two classes of fashionable one-piece frocks this year, those made of duvetyne and those made of navy blue tricotine. How to wear either of these modish colors and not look too commonplace is the problem of the well-dressed woman.

This dainty miss has solved her problem by paying special attention to her hat. Such a hat would make air among any number of similar frocks. The rolled turban of the Hindu inspired this creation, which is made of gold lace in truly oriental fashion. To complete the oriental effect a brown tulle veil is worn in harem style over the lower part of the face with just the saucy American eyes peering out. A huge silk tassel is used to finish one end of the veil, the other being fastened to the hat in the back. This hat is particularly appropriate for afternoon wear.

RESCUE PARTY GIVES UP SEARCH FOR 20 ENTOMBED MINERS

(By Associated Press.)
Steubenville, Ohio, Oct. 30.—After battling their way to within 150 feet of where 20 miners have been imprisoned since yesterday morning, rescue workers were ordered out of the Y and O mine at Amsterdam, Ohio, this morning, by mine officials and state mine inspectors who feared an explosion might occur, according to word received here. Hope has been abandoned that the miners are alive. Rescue parties worked all night in the gas filled mine. When 150 feet distant from the entry in which the 20 miners were supposed to be held, fire broke out behind the rescue party and its members were forced to fight their way through flames and smoke. Subsequent attempts to rescue the entombed men, failing, the officials at day break ordered the men to leave the mine. Coal was after through the entire workings and the mine was filled with gas.

GENERAL VS. VICAR
London, Eng.—At a reception to returned soldiers at Langley Mill, General See, the Undersecretary for Air, accepted a challenge by the Vicar, the Rev. H. Gilchrist, to a singing duel, with the audience as judges. The Vicar sang the "Anchor's Weighed" and the General followed with "John Peel," accompanying himself at the piano. The verdict of a draw was announced amid applause and each singer received a box of chocolates.

MOST ILLUSTRIOUS CORPSE
London, England.—The Dorset village of Worth Matravers, which is to be sold by auction, has few claims to fame. The most illustrious corpse in its churchyard seems to be that of one Benjamin Jesty, who died in 1816, and who was the first person who introduced the cow-pox by inoculation, and who from his great strength of mind made the experiment from the cow on his wife and two sons in the year 1774.
Most readers will agree with Sir Frederick Treves's comment that "an epitaph says nothing of the greater strength of mind shown by the wife and two sons in submitting themselves to this hazard, nor how it came to pass that the iron-minded Benjamin did not first try the experiment upon himself."
